

SOLDIERS CHEATED AFTER A LONG TRIP

Texas and Oklahoma Artillery-men Back, but Never Pulled a Lanyard.

MARCHED INTO ARMISTICE

Three Dog Mascots on Kentuckian, Including a Bad Actor of German Ancestry.

Opinion among the twenty-one officers and 1,320 men of the 345th Field Artillery, the principal organization aboard the transport Kentuckian, which docked here yesterday, was that it was tough to travel all the way from Oklahoma and Texas to France only to have the Germans quit on them before they had a chance to pull a lanyard.

But, at the same time, it was mighty fine to feel the soil of the United States under foot again. Everybody agreed to that from Col. George L. Wertenbaker, a regular army man, down to one of the three mascots, first class, aboard. All three mascots are dogs, one a native American, another a naturalized American of Pomeranian ancestry, and the third a German without even his first papers.

The American is a pup of great intelligence but of dubious ancestry whose name was mislaid or fell overboard, or something. The Pomeranian is a pro-American named Metz, who sports two service stripes and a wound chevron. The third dog, owned by Major E. S. Thatcher, is what is technically known as a bad actor in military circles. His principal sport consists of trying to bite doughboys when their backs are turned. Major Thatcher is sure that his German police dog is utterly more because of innate iniquity than environment.

When the Crown Prince, travelling light and rapidly toward Holland, leaving Germany flat, started from Treves, the German dog, then known as Koenig, stayed behind with bared teeth along with many others with which the Prince was fond of associating. On March 17 a German lieutenant, apparently officer of the royal hounds on the staff of the Crown Prince, gave Koenig to Major Thatcher, who was busy doing police duty in Treves. In honor of the day Koenig officially became Pat, but actually, in spirit and action, he remains Koenig.

A buck private who said himself that his reputation for veracity was unquestioned back in Oklahoma is authority for the statement that Pat barked himself hoarse at the Statue of Liberty and tried to revive the war right then and there.

CURTIS PLANE FOR RUTH LAW.

Aviator Now Only Needs Navigator to Fly Across Atlantic.

Ruth Law, the aviator, after looping the loop and doing other dangerous things in the air all over Japan and China, is back in New York to make preparations for a transatlantic flight.

The Curtiss company, she says, is now making an airplane of the land type in which she will try the dangerous flight, and all she needs is a light bodied but not light headed man to navigate the plane and its heavy load of gasoline across the Atlantic. The machine, she says, will carry thirty hours supply of gasoline, although Miss Law expects to make the 1,529 mile from Newfoundland to Ireland in about nineteen hours flat.

SUMMERTIDE BLOUSES

Of Crisp, Cool Organdy

Special, 5.00

The enchantment of Summer days is here. And is it not true that much of the enchantment lies in the innate love a woman has for the sheer, light outer things that Summer fashions bring, as well as in the flowers the sun brings forth? The sun shines—and Fashion smiles.

As it happens, Fashion showers her sweetest smiles this season on Blouses of sheer, crisp Organdy—and she puts the seal of the mode on these Blouses of ours, for she likes artistic touches of handwork.

Illustrated are refreshing versions of the Organdy Blouse in White or Shell Pink. Fastidious simplicity is their aim—the hardest to achieve! Exquisitely executed hand-drawn work, bits of clever embroidery and dainty tucking are their only adornment.
